201. 1920 A. Galiano Grand Concert Guitar

The first quarter of the 20th Century in New York saw the establishment of what has become referred to recently as "The Italian Guild" - a set of affiliated small retail stores and instrument workshops operated by Italian immigrant luthier/businessmen including Antonio Cerrito, Raphael Ciani, J. Nettuno, Nicolai Turturro and others. Some of these craftsmen appear to have had ties to the Oscar Schmidt Company's instrument factory in nearby Jersey City, NJ, builders of the iconic "Stella" guitars. While often similar in design, the instruments produced in the small Little Italy shops exhibit a much higher level of craftsmanship and original detail than Schmidt factory products. Many of these instruments were labeled "Galiano", a non-specific brand name that appears to have been shared by several of the shops on both hand-made and re-labeled factory product. This Grand Concert flattop was constructed in 1920 and contains many noteworthy (and aesthetically-pleasing) features. Made of highly-resonant Brazilian Rosewood, this instrument has retained both its beauty and its tone after nearly 100 years. Complete with stately purfling matching its rosette, this Galiano most notably features a vine inlay that adorns nearly the entire fretboard. Comes with modern case.

Condition: VG+; missing endpin, surface scratches on the top, back, and sides; a few cracks on the top, some seam separation on the lower back bout on the sides of the backstrip.
Estimate: $5,500 - $7,500

204. c. 1950s Gibson L-7C

Serial#: A4770V07083. The Gibson L-7C is a wonderful mid-level acoustic archtop guitar with a rounded Venetian cutaway that provides easier access to the upper frets. Boasting a 17-inch body, the L-7C produces a big, powerful tone with impressive volume projection. Features include dual-parallelgram inlays on the bound rosewood fretboard, bound headstock, fully multi-bound body, layered pickguard, tulip tuners, and classic trapeze tailpiece. The 25-1/2" scale and X-bracing deliver surprising snap and volume with unsurpassed tonal integrity. *I think this was actually a 1950 or 1956 guitar from Kalamazoo, not a newer Bozeman product. FON/Serial numbers plus condition seem to confirm this. Would need to see numbers again to verify. Price estimate is for '50s version

Condition: G; warped pickguard, few surface dings on top, light finish checking, broken and corroded pickguard base
Estimate: $4,000 - $5,000

205. c. 1900 Joseph Bohmann Jumbo, Lowenstein Collection

Pat. May. 18.90. Serial#: 427962. This jumbo guitar is perhaps the stellar achievement of Joseph Bohmann's guitar-making career, though not his most elaborate instrument. All parts are original, including the bridge and tuners. It is at least 60 years ahead of its time in size, construction, and volume. Painstakingly restored to its original condition by master luthier Paris Banchetti, this guitar has back and sides of solid master grade Birdseye Maple and a solid top of what appears to be Sitka Spruce, designed as a modern jumbo with dimensions portending the modern archtop guitar. Though ahead of its time in design, its wood harkens back to an age where there were still massive old growth trees. The back is one solid piece of Birdseye Maple, which could only come from a tree before the modern era. (It is not a book matched set.) The bridge is the now classic, mature Bohmann style, where he has used brass for a saddle support and small brass wood screws as string guides for precise spacing and height. The high radius fretboard is perfectly shaped for the guitarist's hand while being reminiscent of Bohmann's violin-making skills, and the tuners are proprietary high ratio enclosed style, requiring a unique piece of woodworking on the headstock at a time when most other luthiers were using slot head designs so that standard tuners could be mixed and matched. Most unusual is the size which provides a booming sound from the Maple. Parlor guitars, mostly played by women at the turn of the century, had short scales and small bodies. This is a performance-ready guitar, to be played by a man outside the parlor. The geometric shaped inlays are classic Bohmann in their post-modern design. The guitar has the construct of a presentation guitar, without binding or an elaborate rosette.

Condition: Good playable condition; some scratches on back, cracks below bridge, one crack on top
Estimate: $7,000 - $10,000

206. c. 1935 Wm. C. Stahl Mandolin with Three-Point Scroll Body

Serial#: No serial number. This mandolin is one of only eight known Stahl mandolins with a three-point body and its distinctive scroll. The same idea is seen on a small number of Maurer and Euphonon-made mandolins. The high arch built into the top and back is accomplished by bend the wood over the braces which provides a large chamber for the sound to resonate. This instrument exudes a very large volume with more than ample sustain. The 14" scale length gives a mellow but gutsy sound. Brazilian rosewood back and sides compliment a nicely-grained spruce top. The top, back, and heel-plate have multi-ply bindings which add to the beauty of the Euphonon-style purflings. Mahogany neck with ebony fingerboard complete with pearl fret dots and position dots in the binding. The only non-original parts are the tailpiece and its engraved cover, but they are common to the Larson brands and fit the footprint of the original holes. The tuners are original and work nicely. Comes with form-fitting Golden Gate hard case sporting minimal wear.

Condition: VG; tailpiece in neck pocket & the bridge is off the body but in the case; a few dings & scratches on top & back, frets with some wear in first position but does not impact playing
 Estimate: $2,000 - $2,500

207. 2000 Gibson Custom Art Deco L-5 Auburn

Serial#: 21701003. Another rare guitar coming out of the Custom Shop and designed by Bruce Kunkel is the Art Deco L5, which he executed during his time in Gibson's Historic Division as the Designer and Creator of Art Guitars for the company. Kunkel picked some of his favorite objects hailing from the Art Deco period after being called upon by General Manager Rick Gembar, and one of those images is prominently featured on the back of this instrument: a 1934 Boat Tail Auburn interpreted as wood and metal marquetry. This guitar has a unique stair-stepped pick guard and matching truss rod cover, with its title engraved in the mother-of-pearl inlays. The Gibson logo on the pick guard is hand cut from solid gold, and engravings on the gold tail piece was masterfully executed by Nick Krimmons. Seeing as this was a unique project given to the company's then-master luthier, this is the only guitar of its kind ever produced by Gibson never to be recreated again.

Condition: VG+; slight oxidation on tailpiece, very slight finish checking on face side of heel
 Estimate: $25,000 - $40,000

209. 1964 Gibson LG-1

The LG-1 was introduced along with the LG-2 and LG-3 as a student model during World War II. All three models were very similar, and the LG-1 featured Mahogany back and sides with a Spruce top. Since it was geared toward the learning player, the LG-1 used lateral or ladder style bracing. Despite its modest beginnings, the LG-1 was popularized by Elvis as he played on his own model in five movies he starred in for MGM throughout the 1960s.

Condition:
Estimate: $1,400 - $1,700

210. Lukas Brunner 8-String Guitar, "The Air Conditioner"

Lukas Brunner is a master guitar builder from Lavin, Switzerland whose work is constantly evolving. His "outdoor guitar," a concert-quality instrument, offers a removable neck for travelers. This unique, one-of-a-kind 8-string guitar offers Brunner's own "flying top" bracing system. The action is adjusted by an adjustable Allen screw between the braces and the alpine spruce top, which is laminated for stiffness in the center (imagine a cross-grained bridge plate feathered into the top). The braces never actually touch the top, and this adds resonance. The fingerboard extension is also "flying"; it does not contact the top and this further reduces damping. Instead of a traditional sound hole, the "air conditioner" offers three sound ports on the bass side. Each has a removable "vent door" that matches the curve of the side. Insert the pin on one side and press it into the rubber block on the other side of the hole far enough to put the pin on the other side of the vent into its side of the hole. The rubber exerts enough pressure to keep the vents in any position chosen while eliminating any buzzes or vibration. Each of the ports has a perfectly crafted wooden "lip." Also notable is Brunner's signature "twisted cutaway." The compound curve follows the curve of the side and also the angle of the neck block. As an 8-string, this instrument was conceived to have an extra high string and an extra low string with a standard guitar "in the middle." The fingerboard is ebony under the standard six strings, and Rosewood under the outer strings, making it easy to see "the guitar inside the guitar." The fan frets offer the advantage of longer bass strings and a high (.08) string that isn't under more pressure than it should. 24-frets offer a full range from piano-like basses up into the "mandosphere." String spacing is slightly narrower than standard to accommodate the extra strings and facilitate faster picking. For fingerstyle jazz enthusiasts, this unique 8-string offers stunning good looks, easy action, a 6-octave range, a "chimey" tone, and superlative craftsmanship. Lukas Brunner has established a fine reputation among European builders, and this one-of-a-kind Rosewood art guitar will surely become more and more collectible as time passes.

Condition: Like new with hard shell case.
Estimate: $3,000 - $4,000

211. Les Paul-Owned Gibson Les Paul Deluxe, c. 1974-75

Serial#: 520046. Throughout the Classic Rock era of the 1970s, if one mentioned "Les Paul" to a guitarist they usually heard "Deluxe." Made in the image of the original single-cutaway set-neck Les Paul Standard of 1958 to '60 but with a pair of mini-humbucking pickups for the brighter, more cutting tone that many players were demanding, the Les Paul Deluxe ruled the roost for the better part of a decade, and found an enduring place in the hearts of guitarists and collectors alike that has held fast ever since. Crafted in the image of the most revered version of this model from the early '70s, the Les Paul Deluxe newly recreated by Gibson USA offers all the ingredients that helped this instrument stand out from the crowd, including traditional tonewoods and electronics, superb playability, and first-class Gibson craftsmanship. This specific LP Deluxe was owned by the man himself, and as he had been known to do, personally etched a message to a friend on the back of the headstock.

Condition: G; one significant gouge in upper region of neck (13th fret), scratch near the 11th fret, edge wear and dings, dings along headstock; no pickup covers, original tuners replaced and screwholes from the originals present
Estimate: $5,000 - $8,000

212. 1991 Gibson Custom Chet Atkins SST Celebrity

A solidbody with no sound hole, this instrument provides zero feedback. Other features include mother of pearl star inlays on the fretboard and the bridge, the Gibson logo inlay in mother of pearl on the headstock, a Chet Atkins trussrod cover, and a specialty pickguard with "Celebrity" printed in script. This specific instrument also bears Chet's signature in black marker with his trademark acronym, "cgp," which stands for "certified guitar player."

Condition: VG; missing high E bridgepin and string, slight finish checking and scratch on lower treble bout
Estimate: $1,500 - $1,600

213. "Guernica" Nouveau Flamenco Guitar by Allan Beardsell, Lowenstein Collection

Serial#: No. 93, 2007. This was the guitar that Mr. Beardsell used to introduce himself to many in the American guitar market, having displayed this nylon string flamenco instrument at the famous Healdsburg Guitar Festival and used it as the centerpiece for his initial internet site. The guitar was later displayed at the Newport Guitar Festival as well, where it was a star attraction for its radical sound ports and brace work construction which rises like a cathedral from the back of the guitar. It has been played by many great guitarists in the United States. One-of-a-kind, this guitar is called "Guernica" because of the torch inlay placed near where the neck meets the body. The torch is taken directly from the famous Picasso mural which hangs in the United Nations. One of the most astounding flamenco guitars ever built, the back and sides are cypress, but that is where the relationship to standard flamenco guitars end. The peg tuners which look like friction tuners common to flamenco guitars are actually internally-geared. The neck can be adjusted on a multiple axis from one point using Mr. Beardsell's unique trussrod and neck adjustment system, which allows this guitar to be played by any style flamenco artist while creating total access to all frets. The two side sound ports are large enough to place a fist through, and dispel any notion that sound ports must be limited to any particular size. Apart from improving the sound for the listening audience, they provide a perfect acoustic monitor for the player-an experience unparalleled with any other flamenco guitar. A short review of Mr. Beardsell's guitars makes obvious his interest in jazz instruments. This guitar, while ostensibly a flamenco or classical guitar, is designed to be perfect for jazz as well. Scale length and neck profiles are unlike anything on the market, and even the gypsy jazz design features hearken back to the jazz tradition. All the binding and inlay is immaculate, but it is the advanced design, uniqueness of the instrument, and the pivotal nature of the guitar to Mr. Beardsell's career and its iconic reputation in the guitar world which make "Guernica" the ultimate collector's item and the ultimate guitar for the flamenco, classical, or jazz player.

Condition: G; some scratches on top
Estimate: $12,000 - $15,000

214. 1954-55 Gretsch Model 6130 "Round-Up" Guitar (from the Tennessee Museum Exhibition) with Two Matching Tweed 1954 Gretsch Electromatic Amps.

1954-55 Gretsch Model 6130 "Round-Up" Guitar (from the Tennessee Museum Exhibition) with Two Matching Tweed 1954 Gretsch Electromatic Amps. Serial#: 13158 (guitar). Gretsch made the solidbody "Round-Up" guitar from 1953 to 1958, and nearly all of those were maple or mahogany top; however, in the first early years of production a small number were made with a genuine knotty-pine top. This example stemming from late 1954-early 1955, has that special top. Also adorning this instrument is an engraved pearl "cow & cactus" fret inlay, brass "cowboy" belt buckle tailpiece, burned-in "G" brand, single-coil DeArmond pickups, and sides with brass studs and tooled leather wrapping. This is the exact Gretsch Round-Up guitar that was on exhibit at the Tennessee State Museum in 2012, and featured in their exhibition book The Guitar, an American Love Story. (A copy of of this book is included with the lot.) Also with the guitar are two original Gretsch Electromatic tube amps, both in original tweed, which matches the guitar's case. The first larger amp features twin oval speakers and original woody foot-switch. Completing the trio is the smaller 1954 Electromatic amp, with 8" speaker, also in matching tweed. This lot includes the original tooled-leather strap with jeweled buckle, plus the original 1955 Gretsch catalog, early '50s Gretsch string set in original red box, 1950s guitar capo in its original box, vintage "Riding on the Prairie" song sheet, and amp-cord.

215. 2002 Gibson Super 400 CESN Blonde, Robert Yelin Collection

Serial#: 20282003. The Gibson "Super 400" is a high-end carved solid wood archtop guitar. The largest, fanciest-adorned, and highest-priced factory built archtop / hollowbody guitar in the Gibson portfolio. A highly-influential model which inspired many other master luthiers, it was first sold in 1934 and named for its $400 price, as was the custom for Gibson guitars during that era of the company. There have been slight variations on the model since its inception, and this specific example shows Gibson's desire to embrace the 1950s desire for electric instruments, thus renaming the guitar the Cutaway Electric Spanish (CES). This electric version of the famed Super 400 features great quilted Maple in a high-luster blonde finish. The eye-catching neck is topped by a 20-fret ebony fingerboard with pearl block inlays and multi-ply black and white binding, which was then hand-fitted with Gibson's traditional ES-rounded neck profile. The pickups are a pair of Gibson's legendary '57 Classics, which faithfully capture the unique and subtle variations between coil windings of the original PAF humbuckers of the late 1950s, delivering a warm and full tone with a balanced response. Other appointments include Gibson's traditional five-piece split diamond motif inlay on the headstock and Schaller M6 tuners.

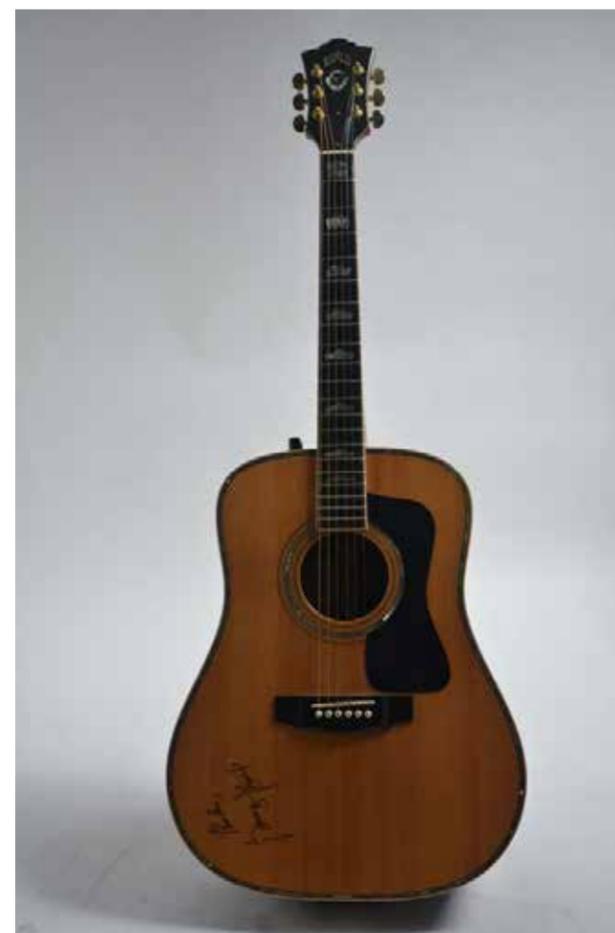

Condition: VG+; trussrod cover removed but inside case along with six pearl stairstep tuner buttons + Tun-O-Matic bridge
Estimate: $10,000 - $15,000

216. c. 1904-05 Larson Brothers Presentation Special Order

Although the brothers left Sweden many years before, this particular instrument was ironically found in their home country. According to noted vintage instrument dealer George Gruhn, this guitar is the most ornately-ornamented early Larson he has ever seen. The Waverly tuners with special ivory buttons were engraved by Handel and inset with flowers in a gold inlay, the same seen on Martin guitars as early as 1893. It has a mahogany neck and the fingerboard is adorned with a pearl tree-of-life vine and flower pattern. The guitar's body is constructed of Brazilian rosewood and a fine spruce top; the top, back, and sides are trimmed with abalone. The standard Larson-shaped ebony bridge contains pearl inlays resembling pairs of inverted ifs on each flat end. The beautiful, straight-grained, book-matched Brazilian rosewood back has abalone trim around the edges as well as down the backstrip. According to Robert Hartmann (grandson and grandnephew of the Larson Brothers, respectively), this specific guitar is the first Larson six-string he has seen with abalone trim on the back. The spruce top has crack repairs in the lower bass bout and there was also a repair made to the bass side rim. Despite these repairs and its age, this guitar still emits a bold, yet sweet tone very pleasing to the ear.

Condition: Some playing wear on top, some playing wear on neck and back, some top cracks showing signs of repair
Estimate: $25,000 - $35,000

Estimate: $12,000 - $15,000

226. 1959 Jose Ramirez Classical

After Jose Ramirez II died in 1957, Jose Ramirez III assumed control of the family workshop, but he was forced to work as more of a supervisor than the luthier's role he previously enjoyed. However, he was highly involved in developing new designs and he directed his journeymen in constructing his visions. Amongst those he taught was Paulino Bernabe, whose plaque can be found inside this instrument. Bernabe was a lead luthier in Ramirez's workshop after completing his apprenticeship and went on to be the founder of the Spanish Guitar Institute. The quality of Ramirez guitars built during the late 1950s is quite impressive, particularly from the perspective of tone and volume projection. Some performers prefer Ramirez guitars from this era, which were made with a lighter build than later examples with longer scale lengths, larger sound boxes, and asymmetrical bracing. This 1959 Ramirez has sweet, mellow tone and outstanding playability thanks to its slim, rounded neck profile. It is constructed of Brazilian rosewood for the back and sides, a spruce top, mahogany neck, Tie Block bridge, and the 19-fret ebony fingerboard.

Condition: G; center seam split on top, some playing wear on neck
Estimate: $15,000 - $20,000

227. Tony Mottola's 1952 Gibson Custom Super 400CES 7-String

Serial: A 9934. This one-of-kind instrument was produced by the Gibson Guitar Company of Kalamazoo, Michigan in 1952 for legendary studio musician Tony Mottola. Mr. Mottola was one of the most in-demand musicians of his era and worked extensively with artists such as Frank Sinatra and Perry Como. In addition to his studio work, Mottola also occupied the guitar chair in the Doc Severinson Orchestra on The Tonight Show. The guitar is one of only two 7-string Super 400s ever made and the only one produced with 24 frets. The instrument has a top carved from Spruce with stunning Maple back and sides. It is equipped with custom made P90 pickups with 7 pole pieces. The instrument includes the original hard shell case as well as a copy of the production ledger for the month of March 1952 which was provided by the former president of Gibson, Ted McCarty.

Condition: VG
Estimate: $60,000 - $70,000

228. 1958 D'Angelico Custom

Born into a New York Italian family, noted luthier John D'Angelico began his career apprenticing under his great-uncle, Raffaele Ciani, where he learned to make violins, mandolins, and flat-top guitars. This classic Blonde beauty is outfitted with gold-plated hardware, triple inlay in the headstock (including the scripted D'Angelico logo), and prominent pearl solid block inlays on its ebony fretboard. As with many of the instruments from his shop, this specific guitar was a custom piece for a jazz player. It has a shorter scale neck and is relatively unadorned in comparison to D'Angelico's stock models.

Condition: VG; possibly with unoriginal pickguard and unoriginal pickup
Estimate: $18,000 - $25,000

229. Greg Brandt Custom Classical Blonde, Robert Yelin Collection

Serial#: 1832013. Greg Brandt is one of the most respected nylon-string luthiers on the West Coast. His shop in North Hollywood, now in its fourth decade, produces a limited number of top-quality guitars for some of the finest players in the business. With its medium-sized body, this Custom Classical guitar made for Robert Yelin features a Spruce top, Indian Rosewood back and sides, and a Cedar neck. This guitar's traditional European design boasts an ebony fingerboard with no fret markers. Subtly adorned with a mosaic rosette and Brazilian Rosewood back strip, this instrument proves that mature Spruce allows for a compelling voice in every playable register.

Condition: Near-mint
Estimate: $3,000 - $4,000

230. 1942 C.F. Martin 0-15

Serial#: 83400. At $25 upon its introduction in 1940, the 0-15 was Martin & Co.'s most economical guitar. The company's response to the deepening Depression through the mid-1930s was a few prototype 15 series guitars built in 1935. (The 15 Series did not enter production until the Spring of 1940.) Only the 14-fret single 0 size was offered in the new 15 Series at the dawn of the 1940s. Built in 1942, this 0-15 is a relatively young example of the Series. It is an elegant little guitar, otherwise unadorned but for its unique and cool tortoiseshell celluloid headstock overlay. Like every guitar built before the War, this one features finely-scalloped top bracing and a tiny Maple bridge plate.

Condition: Fair condition; some top cracks, some scratches, playing wear on neck, crack on back; comes with original case, that of which is very worn.

Estimate: $2,500 - $3,500

231. 1965 Gibson J-200 Custom, Gordon Waller (Peter & Gordon) Collection

Serial#: 175284. In 1965 Gibson gave Peter Asher and Gordon Waller a pair of custom-made J-200 guitars. This is one of the two. As the extensive wear and tear shows, Gordon Waller played this guitar often. While acoustic purists consider the electric guitar-style Tune-o-matic bridge embedded in the rosewood bridge (a feature Gibson added to this model in 1961) a detriment to its tone, Gibson J-200s from the 1960s are favored by many rock guitarists for their brilliant, percussive rhythm tones and sweet midrange in the studio. Many noteworthy songs from the 60s and 70s prominently feature the sound of J-200s from this era, including "Here Comes the Sun" and "While My Guitar Gently Weeps" by the Beatles, "Pinball Wizard" by the Who, and "Babe I'm Gonna Leave You" and "Black Mountain Side" by Led Zeppelin.

Condition: G; lots of playing wear; wear to gold finish on tuner buttons, finish checking, some fingernail wear on fretboard (lower frets); some chips in rosewood bridge at low E and A strings respectively, L.R. Baggs tune-o-matic bridge pickup replaces original bridge

Estimate: $10,000 - $20,000

232. 2001 Gibson Custom Shop Mickey Baker Les Paul Reissue

Serial#: 71759. An unusual Les Paul Custom with infinite control over the three pickups. The re-issue 'Mickey Baker' Les Paul Custom was available by special order only between 1999 and 2003. It is unknown exactly how many were produced but the likely number is somewhere between 25 and 50 guitars. This specific guitar was signed by Les Paul in silver ink with the inscription "To Russell / Keep Pickin' / Les Paul". This instrument has a solid Mahogany body and a one-piece mahogany neck with a medium-to-thick profile just like the very rare original '57 three PAF Mickey Baker Custom. Ebony fretboard with 22 frets and inlaid pearl block position markers. Headstock with inlaid pearl "Gibson" logo and pearl five-piece split-diamond inlay. Two-layer (black on white) plastic truss-rod cover with "Les Paul Custom" engraved in white. Mickey Baker (also known as Mickey "Guitar" Baker) was half of the pop duo Mickey & Sylvia, who had a hit single with "Love is Strange" in 1957. The song was written by Bo Diddley and Jody Williams, who had developed the distinctive lead guitar riff. Eventually the song, much more than just a riff, ended up being credited to Baker and two other peers. He is listed in Rolling Stone's list of the "100 Greatest Guitarists of All Time." Baker is also noteworthy as a session guitarist and guitar educator. COA tag on case.

Condition: VG
Estimate: $4,000 - $6,000

233. D'Angelico EX-SS Sunburst, Robert Yelin Collection

Serial#: KS13086195. The D'Angelico EX-SS is a laminated flame Maple semi-hollowbody guitar offering all of the full-bodied, rich D'Angelico sound in a lightweight, more compact 15" single cutaway body. The 2-piece Maple neck is carved into a comfortable, slim profile and features a Walnut skunk stripe and a 1-11/16" nut width. Topped with a Rosewood fingerboard, the EX-SS also comes with high-output Kent Armstrong humbuckers, a signature D'Angelico stairstep trapeze-style tailpiece, a distinctive D'Angelico headstock with a striking mother-of-pearl Excel inlay, and Art Deco truss rod cover.

Condition: VG+
Estimate: $1,000 - $1,500

234. 1960 Gibson EB-6 Bass, George Benson Collection

Serial#: A33611. The EB-6 was Gibson's only short-scale six-string bass manufactured during an era of guitar production that produced some extremely collectible and expensive models. Gibson made only 77 of these semi-solidbody EB-6s in 1960 and 1961 before the model was converted to a solidbody variation. Gibson created the EB-6 in 1959/60 as a complement to the EB-2, tuned E-A-D-G-B-E, like a standard guitar but an octave lower. Like the EB-2, the EB-6 had one special humbucking bass pickup and two tone control knobs (one volume and one tone) with a bass/baritone switch to broaden the tonal range. While the EB-6 resembled a guitar more than a bass, it was possible to differentiate it by its slightly longer neck; otherwise the tuning machines and the overall appearance were similar to a single pickup guitar. Comes with original case.

Condition: VG; a few surface scratches on top, most of the tuning pegs are broken off or have shrunken over time, missing trussrod cover

Estimate: $8,000 - $12,000

235. c. 1935 Larson Brothers 16" Euphonon

A beautiful example of the Larson Brothers art at its zenith, complete with original hard shell case and Naval Aviator decal of the presumed original owner. Brazilian Rosewood back and sides meet a 14-fret neck. Abalone purfling and a multi-ring rosette compliment other inlays found along the fingerboard.

Condition: VG+; finish checking on the front of the headstock, surface scratches on both front & back, a few dings on the front

Estimate: $35,000 - $55,000

236. 2007 Leo Burrell "Fat-Boy" Guitar, Lowenstein Collection

Serial#: CF0139. Dated Nov 22, 2007. A true oddity in the modern golden age of guitars, Leo Burrell took the concept of a user friendly, ergonomic guitar, and attached afterburners to it. A good carpenter; nobody has ever accused Burrell of being a master luthier. Areas of the guitar on the headstock, body and other spots which look as though they might be damaged, are actually features of the guitar as it came from Burrell's small shop. When you are twisting the body and neck of a guitar at 45-degree angles and building multi-layer headstocks, sometimes the edges just don't meet. "Oh well," says Burrell. And yet, Burrell guitars have become collector's items because of their rarity, as Burrell no longer makes guitars and released very few to the head-scratching world. The body of this instrument bends around the player's stomach and rib cage, the neck is twisted so as to keep the player from having to twist his wrist, and the headstock is designed for instant access to tuners without hand motions which could hurt the hand. Designed like no other guitar in history, Burrell made before their time: totally outrageous, thought-provoking, and valuable pieces in the history of the guitar making.

Condition: G; crack in the top along high E through sound hole, signs of repair due to possible design flaw
 Estimate: $1,500 - $3,000

237. c. 1960s Bjarton 12-String Acoustic Guitar (Owned by Klaus Voormann & Ringo Starr, Played by John Lennon)

In the heart of Hamburg, Germany is the Reeperbahn, an area often referred to by the locals as "the most sinful mile." For as far back as anyone can recall, it has been home to the City's red-light district plus countless dining and entertainment spots. It was also, back in the early 1960s, where a young Klaus Voormann and his friend, Astrid Kirchherr, first encountered two young groups of musicians. One was Rory Storm and the Hurricanes; the other group was a backup band recently arrived from Liverpool, England... The Beatles! Beatles fans are well-aware of the chemistry that developed between Astrid, Klaus, The Beatles, and their soon-to-be new young drummer (taken from the Hurricanes), Ringo Starr. Together, The Beatles as the world has come to know them, emerged and the rest is Rock & Roll history. Astrid remains known for taking the most compelling photographs of the Beatles, while Klaus—who remained a close friend of the group and shared a London flat with George Harrison and Ringo -- designed the cover of one of their legendary albums, Revolver. During the 1970s, Ringo gave this Bjarton 12-String guitar to Klaus Voormann. Voormann, whose name still appears on the traveling case for the instrument, gave it to leading Beatles expert and collector, Uwe Blaschke. It was Blaschke who went on to create the museum known as Beatlemania on the Reeperbahn, a multi-floor attraction dedicated to The Beatles. This guitar, with its close connection to Ringo Starr and Klaus Voormann, remains in virtually pristine condition. As indicated in the signed statement that accompanies the guitar - the text of which appears below -- John Lennon occasionally played this instrument. The guitar is being sold with a certificate signed and dated in 2015 by Klaus Voormann, detailing the provenance of the Bjarton. It reads: "In the early 70's I often went to visit with Ringo. We were living in Hampstead real close to one another. I often went down the hill to Ringo's house. We went up into his little home-studio under the roof recording, messing around and sometimes even writing a song or two using that lovely 12 string guitar. I loved the sound of the instrument so much that eventually [sic] Ringo gave me this Bjarton [sic] 12 string guitar as a present. I remember John tinkeling on this 12 string guitar whenever he was coming by for a visit. The guitar remained with me for many years. In the late 1990s I gave the Bjarton [sic] to Uwe Blaschke, for inclusion in his collection of Beatles items." (signed) Klaus Voormann

Condition: VG+, hardly played; slight scratching on tailpiece
 Estimate: $30,000 - $50,000

238. One-of-a-Kind 2001 Gibson Tattoo Super 400

Serial#: CS12021. Designed by master luthier Bruce Kunkel for Gibson, this one-of-a-kind guitar is full of artistic design features which make it as much fun to admire as it is to play. The top is a mixture of American Traditional and Japanese-style tattoo designs such as hummingbirds, a skull, and a green fire-breathing dragon. The sides contain banner work as it common on many tattoo designs. The back of this guitar is completely covered in traditional Asian tattoo designs such as koi fish, waves, and a lotus flower, and the back of the neck features a black tribal pattern. The bone nut in a unique font clearly says "Super 400". On the very bottom of the back of this guitar amidst an ocean wave is Bruce Kunkel's signature. A gold trussrod cover is etched with the phrase "One-of-a-Kind" and the scalloped fingerboard features block letter pearl inlays that spell "TATTOO".

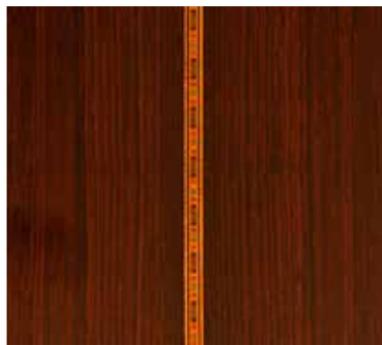

Condition: VG+; slight oxidation on tailpiece, very slight finish checking on face side of heel
 Estimate: $25,000 - $40,000

239. 2000 Gibson Kalamazoo Award Sunburst Historic Collection, Robert Yelin Collection

Serial#: 23190001. In 1978, Gibson craftsman Wilbur Fuller produced the company's first hand-carved, tuned-by-ear custom guitar. The instrument, which in a blind sound-off with some of the best instruments of its era, won the hearts of Gibson and was ultimately dubbed the Kalamazoo Award. The Sunburst edition featured here is only one of four reissues ever made by the master luthiers in Gibson's Historic Collection Department, and is a modern testament to the original Kalamazoo Award Guitars produced in limited quantities between 1978 and 1984. A 17 full-depth archtop with a rounded cutaway and solid carved top, solid maple sides, and carved maple back, even the back of the headstock has a diamond abalone inlay. Adding to its magnificence is an ebony bridge with pearl inlays, wood pickguard with abalone inlay, multi-bound top and back, bound F-holes, bound ebony fingerboard with abalone block inlays, multi-bound peghead with inlay matching the pickguard, and gold-plated hardware.

Condition: Some wear to gold on the pickup, otherwise like new
 Estimate: $20,000 - $25,000

240. 1919 CF Martin 0-45

Serial#: 14302. An original early pre-war Martin Style 45 guitar with a rare early Cedar or Sitka spruce top. It has been said that Martin was experimenting in the late teens with what was then known as "Airplane Spruce." The top has been authenticated as original by TJ Thompson, with original bracing and bridge plate. TJ has observed that the top feels like cedar. Finish is original, with overspray on the Brazilian Rosewood back. A new original OM Style pickguard has been fashioned for this guitar by TJ Thompson. A traditional 45 style torch inlay in abalone decorates the headstock, and 45 style fancy inlays are on the ebony fingerboard. Abalone trim on the perimeter of the top, sides, and back of the guitar is unusually brilliant and fine. This 1919 0-45 has a backstrip design which is not the typical for a Style 45, though 1919 saw many differences due to the huge growth in production and problems with meeting the demand.

Condition: G; non-original pickguard, fair number of top cracks, bridge split from low E to B string
 Estimate: $24,000 - $28,000

241. 1929 Martin 00-28 G.P.

A custom-ordered 00-28 with solid headstock and the same "geared peg" (G.P.) Grover banjo-style tuners as seen on the OM-28 model. There are remaining traces of the name Slim Wooten on the face. The consigner is a respected vintage Martin historian -- believes the 12-fret 00-28 is the prototypical Martin, perhaps the best fingerpicking guitar ever made, and this 1929 example originates from what is perhaps the best year for a 12-fret Martin.

Condition: G; replaced endpins (low E endpin is loose), non-original belly bridge or possible later Martin factory replacement, non-original pickguard
 Estimate: $18,000 - $22,000

242. 1898 Fairbanks No. 5 Electric Special Banjo

This 1898 Fairbanks No.5 Special Electric is one of the earliest examples of the fanciful Victorian engraved pearl inlay that became the standard for the highest grade Fairbanks and Vega banjos. Lot includes original case.

Condition:VG; completely original; very slight corrosion along the head mounting
 Estimate: $11,000 - $13,000

243. 1951 Gibson ES-5

Gibson Blonde Flame Maple ES-5 Pre-Switchmaster Model with three P-90 pickups. The guitar is in wonderful condition, complete with gold waffle tulip button tuners, and is all original with the exception of the work Duke Robillard suggested. From the consignor: "The early pre-Switchmaster ES-5 is a wonderful guitar, but very impractical in its limitations. A lack of a switch to select pickups means having to adjust individual volume controls and then re-adjusting the tone controls every time you want to solo or change pickups to get a new sound. Fortunately, I was lucky enough to receive an education from my friend Duke Robillard, who T-Bone Walker's biographer has called T-Bone re-incarnated. Duke advised me to add a pickup selector switch, but it didn't end there. I had no idea how complicated wiring electrics could be. Wiring pickups is not nearly as straightforward as one would think. Duke also calculated and explained to me how to wire the electronics to allow for selecting the most useful combinations of pickups, taking into account how changing one setting can affect another. Absolutely nobody knows how to make a guitar work the way Duke does, and it didn't hurt that Duke set me up to have his most trusted luthier do the work for me. Working together, they did a magnificent job." Comes with original case.

Condition:VG; surface scratches on back, slight finish checking, some polish wear on trapeze tailpiece
 Estimate: $10,000 - $15,000

244. 1919 Martin/Southern California Music Co. "M. Nunes & Sons" Model I350

Hawaiian music was all the rage following its introduction to a large segment of the American public at the Panama Pacific Exposition in Chicago in 1915. Capitalizing on this popularity, C.F. Martin & Co. shipped six samples of Hawaiian Koa wood guitars to the Southern California Music Company of Los Angeles, as they were one of Martin's largest accounts. SoCal provided Martin with the koa wood from Hawaii, and asked that the trim on these guitars, designed for playing in the Hawaiian style, be as close as possible to those of SoCal's popular ukuleles. To appeal to the Hawaiian market, SoCal asked that the Martin stamp be replaced with the Southern California Music Company stamp, and affixed decals on the headstocks bearing the name "M. Nunes & Sons, Hawaii" and labels inside with either the name "M. Nunes & Sons" or "Rolando". These early samples had Koa wood back and sides, and tinted spruce tops, but after seeing the samples, SoCal decided to offer all-Koa guitars, and to market the three models as the I350, I400, and I500. This guitar is one of the six original samples with spruce tops which were requested of Martin by the Southern California Music Company. Made in a style similar to the Martin 0-18 but suited for playing in the Hawaiian style, it has steel strings and fan bracing similar to Hawaiian guitars made in the same year by Martin for the Ditson Company. The sample Nunes also has the same single ring rosette seen on Ditsons and guitars made by Martin for several other firms, and a tinted spruce top similar to those seen on many Ditsons. These samples have no serial number, while the regular production appears to begin with serial number 19, accounting for the six samples of each model.

Condition: VG-; two cracks on back, one seam split on back
Estimate: $5,000 - $7,000

245. c. 1935 Gibson EH-150 Aluminum Body Lap Steel with Rare Early EH-150 Amp

A rare combination, after 80 years this is still one of the best-sounding electric guitar pickups and still one of the best sounding tube amps ever made. An important piece of history, the first Gibson lap steel, and one of the earliest solid body electric guitars, one of less than 100 made. This instrument comes with its original hard shell case, serial no. 321. Like Rickenbacker, Gibson also made their first lap steel guitars with an aluminum body. These guitars had the same style of pickup made famous by Charlie Christian on the archtop guitars he played with Benny Goodman's band.

Condition: G; quite a bit of wear on the top
Estimate: $7,000 - $9,000

246. Fairbanks Vega Whyte Laydie #2 Banjo

An iconic banjo, this Whyte Laydie was built after the Fairbanks Company was bought by Vega, but before the name was changed. This is the ultimate "clawhammer" and frailing banjo with original 5-string neck, tone ring, tuners, tail piece, and all 28 brackets. 27" scale and 11 3/8" rim. Signed "Jos. B. Rogers Jr.," who provided the highest grade calfskin banjo heads from his shop in Farmingdale, New Jersey. Comes with new, sturdy hard shell TKL case.

Condition: VG; typical corrosion for its age
Estimate: $4,000 - $5,000

247. c. 1856 Ashborn Style 2 Guitar

This is a really wonderful, rare, and historical instrument. It is a fine William Hall & Sons parlor guitar built by James Ashborn. Ashborn was evidently a fine machinist and opened his shop in Torrington, Connecticut in the mid-1830s. He was far ahead of his time with regard to manufacturing and design. (He averaged 54 guitars per month with usually less than ten men working in his shop.) The quality of his instruments is superb. He designed and manufactured his own tuners, "T" style fret wire -- Martin didn't use "T" wire until the 1930s! -- and employed a unique fan-braced body and neck construction. This is a standard size Ashborn Style 2, generally seen as the most popular grade. This guitar has a distinctive bridge and tuners that complement the Rosewood veneer back and beautiful Rosewood clad neck. Comes with original case, which was also made by Ashborn in his Connecticut factory.

Condition: G; large cracks on back repaired with cleats, five top cracks, good playable condition.
Estimate: $4,000 - $5,000

248. 1955 National Town & Country

Built by Valco in Chicago, this guitar has a single cutaway maple body with plastic backplate, bolt-on neck, and a bound Rosewood fretboard with parallelogram inlays. Other features include two single coil pickups, a trapeze tailpiece, adjustable Rosewood bridge, and 3-on-a-plate tuners. Comes with its original 1955 brown hard shell case, which bears similarity to the case for a 1955 Les Paul.

Condition:VG-; some finish checking, wear to the back of the neck, rusted tuner housings
 Estimate: $3,000 - $4,000

249. Rickenbacher Electro B Spanish Guitar & 1937 Rickenbacher Amp

The first solidbody Spanish-style electric guitar ever made accompanied by an equally rare amp. This 1935 Electro B Spanish has a round neck -- it is not square-neck lap steel. This model by Rickenbacher is considered by many as the first real solid electric guitar, and therefore very rare. Noticeable features include the old spelling of the name "Richenbacher" -- now commonly seen as "Rickenbacher."

Condition:VG-; a lot of playing wear, control knobs are stiff
 Estimate: $4,000 - $5,000

250. 1966 Rickenbacker 450 12-String

The Rickenbacker 450 evolved out of earlier combo models in the mid-'50s. Originally, the 450 used the Tulip body shape like the Rickenbacker 400. Starting in mid-1958, however, the body was changed to a Cresting Wave style like the 600 series. This 12-string version, the 450-12, was produced starting in 1964. Design elements include two pickups, a white pickguard, four control knobs, and dot inlays. Comes with original 1966 case.

Condition: VG+; few minor edge dings, some surface scratches on back
Estimate: $3,000 - $4,000

251. 1921 Gibson L-1

From 1908 to 1925, the small-bodied L-Style Gibson guitars were the mainstay of the company production. With its 13 1/2" narrow waist, this archtop guitar contains a round sound hole, a tailpiece with pins set in a Celluloid block, raised pickguard, 13 frets clear of the body, and a slanted "The Gibson" logo on the headstock.

Condition: VG; average playing wear
Estimate: $2,500 - $3,000

252. 1964 National Newport 82 “Map”

Serial#: S20691. Produced for a mere two-year period, the fiberglass-bodied Newport 82 evolved from the Val-Pro 84, and features a highly-polished Pepper Red fiberglass exterior, a single “standard” pickup, controls on the bass side of the body, an adjustable Rosewood bridge, an asymmetrical (“Gumby”) plastic veneered headstock profile, and vibrato tailpiece.

Condition: VG
Estimate: $2,000 - $2,400

253. 1945 K&F Lap Steel Guitar, #501

In 1944, Doc Kaufman, an instrument designer for Rickenbacker, and Leo Fender, a radio and phonograph repairman, received a patent for a new style of lap steel pickup. In 1945 they set up shop as K&F Manufacturing to produce their new lap steel, but one year later Kaufman decided to leave the fledgling company. Leo renamed his company Fender Electric Instruments and, as they say, the rest is history. That history started right here with this K&F Lap Steel. Made in 1945, the body is made from Mahogany and the frets are painted directly onto the fingerboard. The headplate is bent at one end to form the nut, the kind of clever manufacturing solution that Fender would use time and again as he reinvented the solid body electric guitar. This guitar has the Kaufman and Fender pickup, a style where the strings pass through the magnet in a manner that recalls the function of Rickenbacker’s horseshoe pickup. K&F guitars are quite rare, and this model exhibits the design for the single-coil pickup that Fender eventually stopped using years later after his namesake brand established itself in the guitar marketplace. No case.

Condition: G; fret markings very worn
Estimate: $1,500 - $2,000

254. 1957 Rickenbacker Model 1000

One of three short-scale student guitars that were introduced in 1957. The 1000 had one pickup and neck-through-body construction. The production models were three-quarter size tulip-shaped guitars with a one-piece maple neck, a Brazilian Rosewood fretboard with 18 original thin frets, and white dot position markers. (Rickenbacker amended the shape slightly in the last part of the year to include a 'new cutaway feature.')

Original colors included brown, black, gray, and natural. Comes with OHSC.

Condition: G; some broken edges on pickguard at screwholes, some edge wear on back
Estimate: $1,600 - $2,200

255. Kay Swingmaster

Beautiful Maple body, Bigby tailpiece, checkerboard binding, and dual "Kleenex box" pickups. Ideal guitar for jazz, blues, or rockabilly music.

Condition: VG; tuners appear to have been replaced, logo plate bent
Estimate: $1,500 - $2,000

256. 1939 Rickenbacher Silver Hawaiian

A chrome version of the Model B also with 1 1/2" Horseshoe Pickup. Discontinued after World War II. First produced in 1937, Rickenbacher (nee Rickenbacher) made this model with body parts stamped out of sheet metal. The stamping process was economical and the instrument was often stuffed with crumpled newspaper or tissue paper in order to eliminate unwanted resonances while playing. Though not a budget model, the Silver Hawaiian has 35 frets and a chrome-plated hollow body. The first of these models had single volume control, but by the time this guitar was made in 1939, it featured a tone control, too. No case.

Condition: VG; shrunken tuner buttons (4), one missing tuner button, one control knob has been replaced, slight rust near pickup

Estimate: $1,500 - $1,800

257. Rickenbacher B Chrome

Rickenbacher B Chrome

Estimate: $1,500 - $2,000

258. 1930s Rickenbacker Model B Bakelite Hawaiian Lap Steel

Many lap steel players, particularly David Lindley, consider the 1930s Rickenbacker Model B Bakelite model the best sounding lap steel ever made. This Bakelite version of the Model B, featuring a 1 1/2" Horseshoe Pickup, bolt-on neck, string-thru-body design, and white plates, is nearly identical to Lindley's favorite six-string Rickenbacker. This instrument is in beautiful original condition with white metal plates, concentric tone and volume controls, original Waverly "Clover" tuners, and painted fret lines in perfect condition.

Condition: VG; all original
Estimate: $1,500 - $2,000

259. White (Fender) Deluxe 6

Named after Forrest White, plant manager at Fender, this lap steel guitar has a white plastic pickup cover and two knobs, a symmetrical metal fingerboard, block makers, three screw-in leg stands, the White logo, and of course is finished in white.

Condition: G; some playing wear to the fretboard plate, some wear to the white brand decal, some oxidation of chrome control plate
Estimate: $1,200 - $1,500

260. c. 1946 Fender Princeton Lap Steel, #A158

One of the earliest Fender instruments available, this Princeton Steel dates to the very first period of the Fender Electric Instrument Company, soon after the departure of "Doc" Kaufman and the changeover from the K&F partnership. These early steels are the genesis of the entire Fender operation, which was a very small struggling local concern in 1947-8 with very limited production making all of these first instruments extremely rare. The Princeton was the least expensive of a three-model line, but the differences in the instruments were relatively minor. The lack of a tone control and a hard-wired cord are all that separate this model from its slightly more upscale brother the Deluxe. All of these early steels were made of whatever woods Leo had in stock. The pickup is the famous Fender "Direct String" unit, which is still considered one of the best-sounding steel pickups ever designed. The aluminum fingerboard carries roman numerals designating the positions and headplate has the inscribed "Fender Electric instruments, Fullerton California" lightning bolt logo. Original tuners are simple non-descript openbacks probably made by Waverly. Despite its primitive appearance, this is a well-designed steel with a great sound. No case.

Condition: VG
 Estimate: $800 - $1,000

261. Fender FS-52 Lap Steel

The very first Fender guitars were no-frills lap steels, and they were absolutely great. Even today, those first instruments have a pure, singing tone seldom equaled since. The new FS52 Lap Steel introduced in the 2000s is an authentic nod to those great steels of the past. Features include a two-piece ash body, a Fender Standard Stratocaster pickup, and chrome hardware.

Condition: VG+; new reproduction
 Estimate: $400 - $600

262. C. 1950s Martin I-T Tenor Ukulele

This tenor ukulele is completely original and in fine condition. Made of mahogany (top, back, sides, and neck) with a Brazilian rosewood fingerboard, this is a larger model ukulele with non-geared friction pegs and pin bridge.

Condition:VG

Estimate: $1,200 - $1,600

263. 1980 Gibson Super 400 CES (COO1) Sunburst, Robert Yelin Collection

Serial#: 8080017. The Gibson "Super 400" is a high-end carved solid wood archtop guitar. The largest, fanciest-adorned, and highest-priced factory built archtop / hollowbody guitar in the Gibson portfolio. A highly-influential model which inspired many other master luthiers, it was first sold in 1934 and named for its $400 price, as was the custom for Gibson guitars during that era of the company. There have been slight variations on the model since its inception, and this specific example shows Gibson's desire to embrace the 1950s desire for electric instruments, thus renaming the guitar the Cutaway Electric Spanish (CES). This electric version of the famed Super 400 features great quilted Maple in a high-luster Sunburst finish. The eye-catching neck is topped by a 20-fret ebony fingerboard with pearl block inlays and multi-ply black and white binding, which was then hand-fitted with Gibson's traditional ES-rounded neck profile. The pickups are a pair of Gibson's legendary '57 Classics, which faithfully capture the unique and subtle variations between coil windings of the original PAF humbuckers of the late 1950s, delivering a warm and full tone with a balanced response. Other appointments include Gibson's traditional five-piece split diamond motif inlay on the headstock and Schaller M6 tuners.

Condition:VG; corrosion and wear on pickup covers, corrosion on one of the saddle adjustment wheels, rust on pickguard mount bracket, volume control wear, some type of disfigurement of pickguard

Estimate: $5,000 - $8,000
