ANDY Dick — who was arrested over the weekend in LA for assault with a deadly weapon during a fight with his former lover Lucas Crawford — came out of the brawl with a broken leg, he claims to Page Six.

"He body-slammed my leg," Dick, who was bailed out of jail on Tuesday, alleged to Page Six. "My femur got broken and my ankle got shattered and the tendons and ligaments on the other side are ripped off the bone."

A spokesperson for the comic claimed, "Lucas came to Andy's apartment that day already in a bad mood," and that "they were play fighting and razzing each other and Andy says next thing he knew, things turned serious for Lucas."

The rep claimed it was at this point that Dick responded to the attack in self-defense. "Andy got defensive and scared and tried to limp away from him," the rep said. "That's when he grabbed the nearest chair and threw it in Lucas' direction. The corner of the chair made contact [with Crawford]."

Dick alleged, "I was limping and it hurt and then we got into another fight and I threw a chair. He just has a little cut. I am in a cast."

The rep told us, "Andy didn't want to report Lucas. As a friend, he's tried to help Lucas on several occasions, including giving him money and a place to crash when he's needed it. Lucas is obviously an individual who has manipulated and dominated his relationship with Andy."

Dick has publicly struggled with substance addiction, and claimed in 2016 that he had been to rehab 20 times. His rep told us, "Andy and Lucas were drinking. Andy has been open about not maintaining his sobriety." But they said Dick "was drinking socially and remembers everything clearly. He would not consider himself drunk."

Dick insisted to us that he is fine in terms of his relationship with drugs and alcohol. "I don't have substance abuse issues. I don't do drugs and I barely drink. I won't even do a shot of vodka. I'll put a little in and fill the rest with water," he maintained, though his words sounded slurred.

Bubba blew it

YOU might want to get the mouthpiece disinfected first. The sax that former President Bill Clinton played at his inaugural ball in 1993 — signed by pals including Jack Nicholson — will be among celebrity musical instruments to hit the block at Guernsey's Century of Music auction. Rock fans can also buy guitars played by Eddie Van Halen, Bo Diddley, Eric Clapton and Paul McCartney, as well as a Daisy Rock ax signed at the 2006 Grammys by Mariah Carey, Mary J. Blige, Nicole Kidman and Keith Urban. Also up for sale are stage outfits of legends Billie Holiday and Buddy Holly.

Bill bags the Boss

CLIVE DAVIS has snagged Bruce Springsteen and Paul Simon as headliners for Mayor Bill de Blasio's post-COVID Central Park concert, Page Six has learned. "Bruce will also do a duet with Patti Smith," an insider added, and "Jennifer Hudson is also slated [to hit the stage]." The concert — which is intended to celebrate New York City's revival after 15 months of COVID-19 lockdowns — is set to take place on the Great Lawn on Aug. 21. We've also learned that it will air on CNN. Davis — who is helping to produce the event — previously said that eight unnamed but "iconic" stars will perform a three-hour show to a crowd of 60,000. Multiple sources told Page Six that Diana Ross had been approached in hopes of her recapturing the magic of her legendary 1983 concert in Central Park, but she is not performing again until 2022. Simon, of course, also had a one-for-the-books concert with Art Garfunkel there in 1981. Meanwhile, another source told us some celebrities were "a little uncomfortable" after they found out Davis had briefly hired Erich Bergen to handle the megaconcert. Bergen was sued in May for allegedly jeopardizing the "AIDS Walk Live at Home" telecast when he "held hostage" a video he produced of honoree Sir Elton John's acceptance speech. A rep for the "Madam Secretary" actor — who's also a video producer — told Page Six at the time that was a "lie." But the source said of his involvement in the NYC concert, "Everyone [was] dealing with Erich... Celebrities [were] talking to Erich and getting e-mails from him. No one knows him. All they know is the Elton story." The insider confirmed that Bergen had been involved after helping Davis with his Zoom parties for the Grammys earlier this year. "One kind of led to the other," they said. But now he's been bumped from the project and "more major players are running it now," like Dick Clark Productions vet Patrick Menton and Live Nation. Reps for Davis and the mayor's office did not get back to us.

Tuscan lovers

THAT'S amore. Harry Styles and Olivia Wilde (above) were spotted enjoying a romantic vacation together in Tuscany, Italy, Wednesday. The pair were seen looking very much in love in a picturesque seaside town. "Harry has been seen taking a break on the beach in Porto Ercole after he finished filming" the movie "My Policeman" in London, a source told Page Six. We reported in January that Styles, 27, and Wilde, 37, were dating. Her ex Jason Sudeikis has moved on with model Keeley Hazell.

Affleck & Lopez 'Argo'ing to Hamps

COULD the next stop on the Bennifer 2.0 love tour be her palatial estate in the Hamptons? Spies there say there's been feverish activity at Jennifer Lopez's Water Mill estate, with crews sprucing up the grounds, testing the security system and bringing in a fleet of Range Rovers and a boat. Meanwhile, a source told People Ben Affleck and Lopez "are discussing summer plans," and that they "want to spend as much time together as possible." Lopez bought the eight-bedroom, 7½-bath manse for $10 million in 2013, when she told Hola magazine it was her "dream home." Built in 2004, the gated property offers lots of privacy and sits on 3 acres. It includes a spa, office, guest house, media room, sauna, study, outdoor shower and heated pool. The home has been regularly featured on Lopez's Instagram, and last summer she spent a lot of time there with her twins, Max and Emme, and then-fiancé, Alex Rodriguez. Lopez and Affleck were last spotted on Friday night on a date in Beverly Hills, where they dined in a private room for two hours. Reps for Lopez and Affleck didn't get back to us.
